Today, an estimated 37 million Americans are living with chronic kidney disease (CKD). If untreated, CKD will advance to kidney failure, also known as end-stage renal disease (ESRD) – an irreversible condition that is fatal without a kidney transplant or life-sustaining dialysis treatments. Each year in the United States, more than 130,000 Americans are diagnosed with ESRD, and more than 800,000 Americans currently suffer from ESRD.

The bipartisan Kidney Caucus serves as an informational and educational platform for issues surrounding kidney health, technology, and reimbursement. In previous sessions, the Kidney Caucus has made important bipartisan strides to improve early education, prevention, and care for people living with kidney disease. KCP urges lawmakers to continue to build on this progress by encouraging innovation, research, and thoughtful investment in our nation's kidney care infrastructure.
